

Dr Samira Saramo is Senior Research Fellow at the Migration Institute of Finland and Docent of Cultural History at the University of Turku. Her transdisciplinary historical research focuses on themes of place, the environment, community-building, everyday lives, labour, and settler colonialism. Most often, Finnish migrant-settlers in North America are at the center of her work. Saramo's recent publications include "Vahinko!: Finnish Canadian Socialists Making Sense of Accidental Fire" in An Accidental History of Canada (eds. M. Davies & G. Hudson, McGill-Queen's University Press, 2024) and the monograph Building That Bright Future: Soviet Karelia in the Life Writing of Finnish North Americans (University of Toronto Press, 2022).
